DETHLOFF-CUNNINGHAM

The wedding of Miss Margie B. Cunningham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Cunningham, and Mr. Jesse Lee Dethloff, son of Mrs. Frank Dethloff of Escatawpa, which took place Friday, May 19, at high noon, claimed much interest here. Rev. J. F. Brock performed the ceremony in the Moss Point Baptist Church.

The church was beautifully decorated with Southern smilax, ferns, palms and numerous spring flowers. Lighter candles in cathedral candelabra shed a soft glow over the pulpit, making a lovely setting for the wedding ceremony.

The musical program, with Mrs. Linehard Robinson at the organ, consisted of "I Love You Truly," sung very sweetly by little Miss Patty Spruell. To the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, the matron of honor, Mrs. F. M. Johnson, who was becomingly attired in blue lace with matching accessories and wearing a corsage of pink roses, entered, followed by the little flower girl, Doris Dethloff.

sister of the groom, who wore blue lace and carried a basket of rose petals.

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her father, was lovely in a white Spanish lace gown with white accessories. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses and fern, and was met at the pulpit by the groom and his best man, F. M. Johnson. The wedding march from Mendelssohn was played by Mrs. Robinson as the bridal party left the church.

Following the ceremony at the church, a circle of friends and relatives gathered at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Cunningham, where they enjoyed a seven-course wedding dinner.

For her going-away outfit, the young bride wore a navy blue triple sheer jacket-dress, trimmed in white accessories. For their honeymoon trip, they left for points in the West.

Mrs. Dethloff is a graduate of the Moss Point High School, in the class of 1938, and has been employed at the Jackson County Mills. The groom attended the Moss Point High School, and is employed at the Southern Kraft Corporation.

Mr. and Mrs. Dethloff have the many good wishes of their numerous friends and relatives for a long and happy married life.

The schooner Annie M. Murphy of Largely signed petitions have been presented to the board of supervisors of Harrison and Jackson counties by officials of the Harrison-Jackson line Consolidated school, asking them to call a special election in the near future to vote upon the is surance of bonds in the sum of $55, 000 for the construction of a new school building in North Biloxi.

This matter is expected to be con sidered at the meeting of the county boards this week and the date for the election.

It is the hope of those interested in the school building to have it con structed at a place of convenience to all of the students now attending the two schools, which will be modern in every respect and large enough to accommodate all of the educable children of the entire dis trict. It is also planned to place the building at a point where it can be readily seen by those coming through that section, to attract oth ers to locate there as well as furnish proper facilities to educate the chil dren in that vicinity.

Those at the head of the proposi tion are greatly encouraged with the present outlook for the new school building. It is the plan of those in terested to have the bonds prorated between the two counties.

Poem Dedicated To Brothers Lost
In Ship Sinking

A poem dedicated to the memory of Frank and Robert Dethloff, Escatawpa, brothers who were reported missing in the sinking of the cruiser Houston, has been written by M. E. Hulbert of Escatawpa, 36-year-old minister.

The Deathloff brothers were members of the crew of the Houston that was lost, along with other American and Allied vessels, during a battle with units of the Japanese fleet off Java.

ESCATAWPA BROTHERS ON HOUSTON

Frank and Robert Dethloff, brothers, two Escatawpa youths, are among the members of the crew of the United States Cruiser Houston, and have been reported "missing in action" by the Navy Department. They are the sons of the late Captain Frank Dethloff, and Mrs. Lula Dethloff, the latter still residing in Escatawpa.

The Navy disclosed late Saturday that the Cruiser Houston was lost in a battle with superior Japanese fleet during a Java sea battle. The cruiser was lost with 12 other United Nations vessels which were attempting to elude a trap. The only escape was through comparatively narrow channels which were dominated by the enemy. The allied fleet dispersed and attempted to run these straits in small groups. The Houston with the Exeter (British) and the Perth (Australian) and two destroyers, the Pope and the Encounter (British), were overtaken by enemy fleet units. No word has been received from them since.

The Houston carried a crew of about 1,000 officers and men and was commanded by Captain Albert H. Rooks.

MOSS POINT LITTLE GIRL VISITS TOYLAND AND TALKS TO SANTA

Under the caption, "Ann's Visit to Santa Claus," Mrs. Jessie Dethloff of Moss Point, has written the following story of the real experience of her small daughter, Ann, on a visit to Santa Claus in a neighboring city:

Ann was sleeping soundly one morning before dawn when her mother shook her gently to awaken her. "Get up, Ann," said mother, "today is the day we go to visit Santa Claus."

Sleepily Ann opened her eyes, then, realizing what her mother had told her, bounced out of bed and ran to the fire to stay warm.

Quickly she was dressed in a little blue frock with pink bows. She donned white socks, brushed out her hair that had been rolled up the night before and put a blue ribbon in it.

Breakfast was on the table waiting for Ann, but she was so excited that she could not eat.

Grandma came in shortly afterward, because she was going to keep Ann's baby brother, Frank, while Ann and her mother were gone.

Soon it was time for Ann to put on her little overcoat and go with mother to the bus station.

In a few minutes the big, smooth-running bus drove into the station. Ann and mother got on and found seats.

The bus ride was long and Ann grew tired of watching things go by. She sat on the seat and grew very sleepy. But Ann would not go to sleep. She was still too excited. So she started by being a naughty little girl and fell off the seat. With that she decided to be a good girl. Anyway Santa Claus likes only good little boys and girls. This is the time of year for little folks to mind their manners, for you never know when Santa Claus' little helpers are watching, or even Santa Claus himself.

Finally they arrived at their destination and set off to see Santa Claus in one of the big stores.

Up and up they went to Toyland. There they saw mountains of dolls of every description and little wooden wagons. There were dolls' furniture, houses, clothes, and even little washing machines. Also, there were games, and little dressing tables, swings, baseballs and bats. In Toyland everything available during a war-time Christmas was to be seen.

Over to one side of Toyland was the entrance to Santa Claus' kingdom. In went Ann.

Santa Claus was there, sitting on his golden throne with his reindeers and sleigh full of toys right behind him for a spur-of-the-moment take-off. For Santa Claus has many different jobs to do just before Christmas and has to be many places, almost at once.

While he was resting, his secretary was consulting him about the letters from little children that he wanted to read over the radio that afternoon.

Santa Claus looked up when Ann entered. She was so happy to see him that she threw up her hands and said, "Hello, Santa Claus."

Santa Claus laughed. "Ho, ho, ho! Hello, little girl. I'll be with you in just a moment." Then he turned to his pretty secretary and dismissed her. Drawing Ann upon his knee he asked, "What is your name, Sweetheart?"

"Ann Dethloff," Ann told him.

"And what would you like for Christmas, Ann?" asked Santa Claus.

"A doll and an elephant."

"All right, Ann. I'll bring you a doll and a toy elephant."

"No, Santa Claus," corrected Ann.

"No, Santa Claus," corrected Santa Claus.

Ann, "I want a real elephant."

"A real elephant!" exclaimed Santa Claus. "Where could you keep a real elephant, Ann?"

"In the—" she slowly replied, "in the shed."

"Well, Ann," said Santa Claus, "you remind me of a little boy that was in here yesterday. All he wanted was for me to bring him some grasshoppers. And now an elephant!"

"That will be fine, Santa Claus," said Ann, "I'll look for my elephant."

"Goodbye, Ann, if you walk around much today I may see you again. Ho, ho, ho!" laughed Santa Claus.

Down on the street Ann saw a big crowd of people around a shop window, so she went over to see, too.

There in a window was a Santa Claus mannikin, clapping his hands and turning and nodding his head, looking around at the crowd. Surrounding Santa Claus were all sorts of toys moving around him on a track. There were toy jeeps, ambulances, army trucks, cars and tanks filled with little soldiers, sailors, WACs, WAVES, army and navy nurses; all going round and round Santa Claus, on the tracks.

Also there was a cardboard soldier on a cardboard jeep driving over a rough, rough road. Sailor and soldier doll acrobats were doing tricks on barrels. Also, at the bottom and sides of the window, were many pretty dolls, tricycles, and other toys to furnish the window decorations.

All the mechanized toys rolled around, and Santa Claus clapped to the tune of "Santa Claus Is Coming To Town."

Ann watched for a long time. The toy Santa Claus impressed her almost as much as the real one did. So many grown-ups were watching the toy parade the children had a hard time holding their places at the window.

Ann went to another store, and there was Santa Claus again. He had come down the chimney, as is his habit, and gotten his eyebrows all sooty.

When Ann's turn came, after she had told him all she wanted, she said, "Santa, I forgot to tell you that I have a little brother at home, so don't forget him when you come to my house."

"All right, little Ann," laughed Santa. "I'll bring you what you want, and I won't forget that little brother. Oh, yes, be sure that you stay out of mother's lipstick and powder. I may bring you some of your own."

Ann certainly was surprised when Santa told her he had been watching her pour out mother's powder. She resolved she would not do that again.

In the evening Ann got another bus and started the long journey home. And there she met a lady who told her stories about Santa Claus and his midnight ride every Christmas Eve night.

Workshop Termed Success By Singing River Art Group

Dinner at La Font Inn Saturday evening climaxed the second La Font Art Workshop sponsored by Singing River Art Association last week.

Dr. Gulnar Bosch head of the fine arts department at Florida State University, judged the juried show and announced award winners and honorable mentions, giving her reasons for those choices.

Honorable mention went to Lois Neely of Jackson and Lurline Slaughter of Silver City, both of whom received pastel sets; Johnnie Merle Jones of Meridian who received a $10 cash award, and Lillian Meierhenry of Pensacola, awarded a set of paints.

Dr. Bosch said the fourth prize, a $25 merchandise award was made to Halcyone Barnes, Summit, for her sophisticated and skilled workmanship.

Third prize, $50 merchandise award, went to Yvonne Brunton for her straightforward, honest study, full in color and form.

The $80 cash prize was received by Myra Green of Jackson for an abstract which Dr. Bosch felt was "outstanding because of the verticality of the composition as opposed to the more usual horizontal treatment, and also for the passionate, lush color."

Glenn Kirkpatrick presented the $150 cash prize to Lou Eckert of Jackson. Mrs. Eckert's painting was chosen by Dr. Bosch as best in the show because of its patterning, which she said is au courant with the forward-looking West Coast school of figure painting.

The exhibition now hanging at La Font gallery is made up of paintings by Lou Eckert, Myra Green, Lois Neely, Marie Hull and Karl Wolfe of Jackson; Johnnie Merle Jones and Les Green Meridian; Carolyn Compton and Yvonne Brunton, Vicksburg; Halcyone Barnes and Bess Dawson, Summit; Ruth Holmes, McComb; Lillian Meierhenry, Pensacola; Gloria Reese, Starkville; Eugenia Summer, Columbus; Fay

Consumer prices

Point woman one of 250 keeping tabs on changes

Apples, books, nursing care, utilities, housing, clothes.

The quickly changing prices on many of these items tends to send shock waves through consumers, but did you ever really wonder how much the prices on these items fluctuate month to month in Jackson County?

Moss Point's Margie Dethloff knows the down-to-the-penny change — it's her job to know.

Mrs. Dethloff is one of 250 data collectors in 85 cities across the nation who work for the U.S. Department of Labor whose compiled figures make up the Consumer Price Index (CPI) each month.

"One week I may be pricing gasoline, food, tobacco, doctor's fees. Then the next week it might be restaurants, auto repairs, garden shops or dry cleaners," she said. "We are assigned to price just about anything an individual might buy or use as a service, including rents — and they do change."

She indicated that weights fluctuate or the fat content of milk might change which would affect prices. She says that since "accuracy is really stressed, we have to be label readers."

Timing her checks are important.

"I have to check on prices at a given time each month," Mrs. Dethloff said. "usually within a five-day period." Checking at the same time each month allows for a more correct price fluctuation tabulation.

Mrs. Dethloff checks prices in the Jackson County area and also goes as far north as Hattiesburg and Bay Springs.

The CPI, published monthly, is a measure of the average change in prices for a specific marketbasket of goods and services. The index depends on the surveyors to check prices for the marketbasket items in their individual communities.

"The more I see change, the more I think it's necessary that someone keep tabs," she said. "I feel like I'm being useful because we need a measure of price changes in this country because it affects so much."

The Consumer Price Index is widely used by government, business, professional and labor groups in making economic decisions.

"Social Security payments are tied to the CPI," according to Dallas Covington, branch chief for price programs in the Atlanta regional office of the U.S. Department of Labor. "Cost-of-living clauses in many contracts are adjusted by means of the CPI."

"Pensions of retired people in the military, government and in the private sector are tied into the rise in the CPI."

The CPI for all urban consumers covers approximately 80 percent of the total non-institutional civilian population for the U.S. and includes salaried workers, self-employed workers, retirees, and unemployed persons as well as urban wage earners and clerical workers.

So the next time you're shocked by the apparent quick fluctuation in the price of an item, don't forget — Margie Dethloff already knows about it or she will soon — you can count on that.

Brunton Home Is Setting Singing Art Association Tea

The attractive Mediterranean-style home owned by the Ingalls Division of Litton Industries will be the setting for a membership tea of the Singing River Art Association, Inc.

Paul Brunton, executive vice president, and his wife Margaret will assist in receiving guests. Mr. and Mrs. Brunton and Litton Industries have made this offer because of their interest in the community and products of this type, according to an art association spokesman.

The tea is being given in an effort to acquaint the community with the functions of the association and to attract all those interested in any phase of art, and to encourage them to become members.

The Singing River Art Association, which has held 32 exhibits in 1956-57 and 2 in the previous year, was chosen among ten in the nation, to show the Memphis Brook Memorial first children's juried traveling art show in Pascagoula in November.

Two workshops for painting were conducted last year and will be an annual event. Participants attended from four states and included visitors from California and Michigan.

Hugh Williams, Auburn University faculty member and art judge, was instructor for the summer workshop. Ida Kohlmeyer, the only southerner exhibiting at the National Gallery in Washington, D.C., was instructor at the winter workshop.

The 11th Annual School Children's Art Exhibit is now in progress at Jackson County Fairgrounds. The first juried art show in this area will be in April, conducted by the Singing River Art Association in conjunction with the South Mississippi Festival of Arts. Judges will be members of the University of Illinois faculty from Birmingham, Ala.

Valentine becomes bride of Dethloff

Delores Valentine and Bruce Keith Dethloff were united in marriage during a late afternoon service on Aug. 30 at Kreole United Methodist Church, with the Rev. Roy Barlow officiating the candlelight service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Huff of Moss Point. The bridegroom, a resident of Escatawpa, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Dethloff, also of Moss Point.

Nuptial music for the double ring exchange of vows was provided by Lynn King as organist and Ronnie Ross as vocalist.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore formal ivory sheer organza and satin over peau taffeta, fashioned with Alencon lace.

The elongated bodice was designed with a deep yoke of English net and a stand up collar of lace. Leg-o-mutton sleeves of satin and sheer tapered to bridal points ending at the wrist. The A-line skirt and attached court train featured a deeply scalloped border of satin edged in a ruffle on the hem.

Her picture hat of Alencon lace was accented with silk flowers and seed pearls. Attached was an organza pouf and streamer and fingertip veil of illusion.

She carried cascading blue lilies, ivory rose buds, ivy and baby's breath tied with blue and ivory ribbon streamers. Her jewelry included pearl earrings, a gift from her parents, and a gold necklace borrowed from Sheila Pait.

Vickie McKee of Charlotte, N.C., attended her cousin as matron of honor, and honor attendants were Althea Grierson and Mrs. Pait, both of Moss Point.

Bruce Mackay of Lexington, S.C., stood as best man. Groomsmen included Frank Dethloff of Fayetteville, Ga., brother of the bridegroom, and Kai DenBleyker of Moss Point.

Ushers included Mitchell Valentine, son of the bride, and Lenwood Tillman, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, both of Moss Point; Richie Huff of Escatawpa, brother of the bride, and Steve Ogborn of Escatawpa.

A reception was held in the church activity building with Deane Davis directing the fare. Kristi Valentine of Moss Point, daughter of the bride, registered guests.

Tea girls were Ann Tillman and Margaret Dethloff, sisters of the bridegroom, and Lisa Tillman, niece of the bridegroom, all of Moss Point; Deborah Huff of Escatawpa, and Sarah Dethloff of Fayetteville, sisters-in-law of the bride and groom, respectively.

After a wedding cruise to the Bahama Islands, the couple is at home in Escatawpa. On the eve of the marriage, the parents of the bridegroom hosted a rehearsal supper at the church.

Margie Dethloff paid to be shocked by prices

By MARIA HALKIAS
Clarion-Ledger Staff Writer

Returning from the store after purchasing household items is increasingly depressing as the endless impact of inflation continues.

Experiencing the drastic difference in prices from the last shopping excursion is what has put the term inflation in the category usually reserved for four-letter words.

Shoppers, as they search for the elusive bargains, repeatedly ask, "Isn't someone keeping track of these outrageous prices?"

In Mississippi, Margie Dethloff of Moss Point is one of 350 data collectors in 65 cities who keep track of prices for the U.S. Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, which economists call the CPI.

The index, published monthly, is a measure of the average changes in prices for a specific marketbasket of goods and services. The index depends on the surveyors to check prices for the marketbasket items in their individual communities.

The latest index showed consumer prices jumped 12.4 percent in 1980 — the second consecutive year prices have risen at a double-digit percentage rate.

Mrs. Dethloff doesn't know what she's going to be pricing until she gets her schedule assignments from the Labor Department.

"One week I may be pricing gasoline, food, tobacco, doctors' fees. Then the next week it might be restaurants, auto repairs, garden shops, dry cleaners," she said. "We are assigned to price just about anything you might buy or use as a service, including rents."

But still most people associate the CPI with food costs.

A trip to the local supermarket in the Pascagoula area may include checks by Mrs. Dethloff on the price of apples and cabbage. At another grocery store she may record the costs of lunch meats, cheese and paper towels.

But when a CPI data collector walks into a store with his or her blue notebook, they are not checking just prices.

"We read labels and they change, too."

She explained that weights fluctuate or the fat content of milk might change, which would affect the price. She says that since "accuracy is really stressed, we have to be label readers."

Mrs. Dethloff sees her job as a necessary function.

"The more I see changes, the more I think it's necessary that someone keeps tabs," she said. "I feel like I'm being useful because we need a measure of the cost of living in this country because it affects so much."

The index is an important measure of government policy. It also has a profound impact on paychecks.

Dallas Covington, branch chief for price programs in the Atlanta regional office of the U.S. Labor Department, said, "Social Security payments are tied to the CPI, as are cost-of-living clauses in union contracts and wage escalations in general — it's all adjusted by means of the CPI."

But for the Mississippi data collector, it's "just like any other job" collecting the information which is needed for the index.

Yet, curious shoppers who discover what she's doing will ask, "How can I get a job like that?"

There isn't an abundance of openings. In the Southeast, in addition to the Mrs. Dethloff, there are data collectors in Memphis, Nashville, Louisville, Ky., Huntsville, Ala., Albany, Ga., Atlanta, Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., Palm Beach, Fla., Miami, Buford, S.C., Rockingham, N.C. and Raleigh-Durham, N.C.

Mrs. Dethloff said the data collectors go through an intense training program when they first start and are constantly receiving training materials. Any questions they may have are answered, she said, "almost immediately" by personnel in Atlanta or Washington.

Exhibition to feature many local artists

The third unit of the Pascagoula Garden Club's Festival of Art's trio will be the art exhibit featuring local artists. It will be housed with the Spring Flower Show in the Woman's Club Center on S. Pascagoula Street but in an adjoining room. Like the Flower Show it will be open to the public two days, April 22 and 23, from 3 p.m. until after the Lighted Garden Tour.

Following are the names of those whose work will be featured in the exhibit: Cecile Higdon, Pam Brantley, Frankie Broome, Mrs. Paul Stanford, Lurleen Cook, Thelma Bryant, Bitsy Goode, Virginia Sisson, Del Wages, Harriet Slaughter, Irene Smith, Gertrude Jeter, Courtney Weidie, Ray Wingfield Sr., Margie Dethloff and Robbie Slater.

The show offers a wide range of subjects, largely traditional in style and treatment and is with some exceptions the work of amateur artists.

Mrs. Higdon might be called the dean of the group since many of the artists have studied under and drawn their inspiration from her.

Mrs. Higdon is professional in stature with a solid background of preparation for her work. She holds a B.A. degree from Auburn University and is now at work on her master's. She has taken work at the University of Alabama and at Birmingham Southern

She has also studied portraiture under Waltby Sykes and William Steen. At present she is teaching full time at Jackson County Junior College, conducting classes at the Recreation Center in Pascagoula and giving occasional private lessons in her home. Her contribution to this exhibit will be a group of four or more of her fine portraits.

Flowers, a subject dear to every woman's heart will be well represented in this show, some studies in water color but most in oils. Mrs. Brantley has lately been preoccupied with boats. Mrs. Cook will be offering, among other things, two new still life pieces. There will be some landscapes offered and possibly a seascape or two. Mrs. C. W. Smith, chairman for the exhibit, reports that from the 16 artists exhibiting, 45 or 50 paintings will probably be on view.

Hairdressers group makes donation to kidney foundation

The Jackson County Hairdressers Affiliate 11 had its monthly meeting June 3 at Shoney's in Pascagoula. At this special dinner meeting, JCHA president Dolly McMahan presented their guest of honor, Margaret Dethloff, president of the Jackson County Kidney Foundation, with a check of $3,000. These proceeds were raised from ticket sales for the the 29th annual Cosmo Benefit Ball in March at the Jackson County Civic Center in association with National Cosmetology Month. Mrs. Dethloff, a lifelong resident of Jackson County, has served as president of the Jackson County Kidney Foundation for the past four years. This foundation was organized in October, 1968, by several interested residents of the county. Their immediate move was to establish a kidney dialysis program for local residents.

The foundation has always been composed of volunteers. These people were able to raise money to purchase the equipment to start a dialysis unit in 1971. In 1974, the foundation became affiliated with the United Way of Jackson County. It continues its affiliation with United Way and depends almost solely upon their annual allocations as its source of revenue.

The Jackson County Kidney Foundation's objectives are to financially assist kidney failure patients (on dialysis) and kidney transplant recipients. Some assistance is offered for preventive treatment of kidney disorders.

Services include purchase of medications and transportation to transplant centers for which no other funds are available. The foundation also has a special objective, which is to educate the residents of Jackson County on kidney diseases, its treatment and prevention. All applicants are screened on an individual basis.

The Jackson County Kidney Foundation has no affiliation with the American Kidney Foundation nor the National Kidney Foundation of Mississippi.

Renew VOWS

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lee Dethloff were honored June 3, 1989, on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary with a reception following a small private ceremony at First Baptist Church of Moss Point, where the couple renewed their marriage vows.

The couple was married in the same church on May 19, 1939, when Mr. Dethloff took as his bride the former Margie Cunningham. Officiating at that ceremony was the Rev. John F. Brock Sr. The Rev. J.T. Hannaford officiated at the renewal of vows.

The date had become a tradition in the bride's family, with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Carver L. Cunningham, choosing that date in 1918 for their vows, and her grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob J. Cunningham, being married on that date in 1892. Mr. Dethloff is the son of the late Captain Frank and Mrs. Dethloff.

Hosting the celebration feting the Dethloffs were the honored couple's children and grandchildren.

For her anniversary, Mrs. Dethloff wore peach crepe, its blouson bodice, worked with pearls and iridescents, falling in pleats from the shoulder to a straight skirt. She wore pearls and amethysts, jewelry given to her over the years of their marriage by her husband, and a corsage of gardenias.

Attending her sister for the renewal of vows was Mrs. Robert L. (Jesse) Dethloff of Jackson, Miss., with Mr. Gomez Dethloff serving his brother as best man.

Music for the service was provided by organist Mrs. John F. Brock Jr. and soloist Mrs. Rick Colvin, niece of the bridegroom. Mrs. Douglas Hester, cousin of the bride, directed the service.

Peach carnations and lilies, ivory figi mums, gladioli and gardenias were used throughout the church. Ushers were Carver Gray Dethloff, Brandon Lee Dethloff and Mitchell Burnell Valentine, grandsons of the couple.

Candlelighters were Mr. and Mrs. Lenwood (Ann) Tillman, Lisa Tillman, Margaret Dethloff, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce K. Dethloff

The Christian Life Center was decorated with peach, ivory and gold accents, with yellow roses and gardenias used throughout reception rooms. Assisting the honored couple in greeting guests were Mrs. Eino Haarala and Mrs. R.L. Dethloff.

A memorabilia table arranged by Lisa Tillman and Margaret Dethloff held nostalgic items from the couple's wedding day and family portraits.

Tea tables were laid with lace and held a variety of hors d'oeuvres, and silver compotes held mints and dried fruits. A golden punch was served from a silver bowl.

Pouring punch were Mrs. C.L. Cunningham Jr., Mrs. Douglas Hester and Mrs. Rick Colvin. Coffee was served by Mrs. Albert Broussard and Mrs. Paul Gattis.

An ivory sculpted cake accented with gold leaves centered the cake table and was flanked by crystal candelabra holding ivory tapers. Cutting and serving cake were Mrs. Thomas Huff of Moss Point and Mrs. Doyle Dillard of Mobile, Ala.

Also assisting were Mesdames Rayford Weeks, sister of Mrs. Dethloff; J.C. Cunningham Jr.; Bruce Dethloff, L.E. Tillman and Frank Dethloff, and Lisa Tillman and Kristi Valentine.

Among special guests were Mr. Dethloff's sister and brother, Mrs. Prentiss Nelson and Mr. Forest Dethloff, and several members of Mrs. Dethloff's family, including her aunt, Mrs. N.F. Brown; her brother, C.L. Cunningham, and her cousins, J.C. Cunningham and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Cunningham.

Sgt. Vincent Cox, Reported Missing In Action, Has Returned To Duty

The heartening news has reached Pascagoula that another of her sons reported among the missing is now known to be safe.

On September 6, 1943, Mr. and Mrs. Pedro W. Cox, Sr., 450 Jackson avenue received a report from the War Department at Washington that their son, Staff Sergeant Vincent J. Cox was among the missing.

And on November 9, the hope that the family held to firmly, was turned to certainty when Mr. Cox received word from Washington that their son was safe and has returned to duty somewhere overseas.

"Twig," as Sgt. Cox is better known to his friends, entered the service in August, 1941, and was first sent to Keesler Field and then to Miami Beach, Fla.

After a period of training there, he entered a gunnery school at Tyndall Field, Fla., from which he was graduated as tail gunner, November 23, 1941.

Following further training at Boise, Idaho, and Walla Walla, Wash., he was sent overseas in May, 1942.

The bare announcement of Sgt. Cox's safety is all the news that the family has so far received, but a meeting of the three brothers, Vincent, J. W., and "Pete," as Pedro Cox, Jr., is known in Pascagoula, and their brother-in-law, Bill Ryan, has been planned and no doubt further details will be forthcoming after the men get together.

It isn't stated where J. W. Cox and Bill Ryan are now stationed, but it is known that Pete Cox is in England.

The young service men are members of families prominent in Pascagoula, where P. J. Cox, the elder, is president of Merchants and Marine Bank.

Dethloff Brothers, Heroes of Houston Sinking

Robert and Frank Dethloff, who were heroes of the "Houston" sinking in that they served their country even to the point of where they faced giving up their lives in the "Battle of Java." It may be that Frank has indeed made the supreme sacrifice in that he is still listed among the missing. It was only last week that their mother, Mrs. Lou H. Dethloff of Escatawpa heard from her youngest son Robert, that he is alive and a prisoner of the Japanese at a camp in Burma, and the news has revived hope that Frank, too, will be heard from. SEPT. 10 - 1943

Sergeant Donald L. Wilson, Air Gunner, Reported Missing In Action

Sergeant Donald L. Wilson of the Army Air Corps, 1106 Tucker street, has been reported missing in action over Germany, Dec. 1.

The official telegram from the War Department was received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Wilson, Sunday morning and contained only the bare facts that their son, who is a waist gunner on a Liberator, is missing.

Sergeant Wilson, who is 20 years old, moved to Pascagoula with his family in 1938, and attended the local high school. He left school and was employed at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation yard for a while before he enlisted in the Army Air Corps in Mobile. He received his training at Keesler Field and was sent overseas to a base in England in September. He spent a furlough with his parents late last winter.

While he was stationed in England, his parents heard from him regularly, enthusiastic accounts of his participation in the fighting.

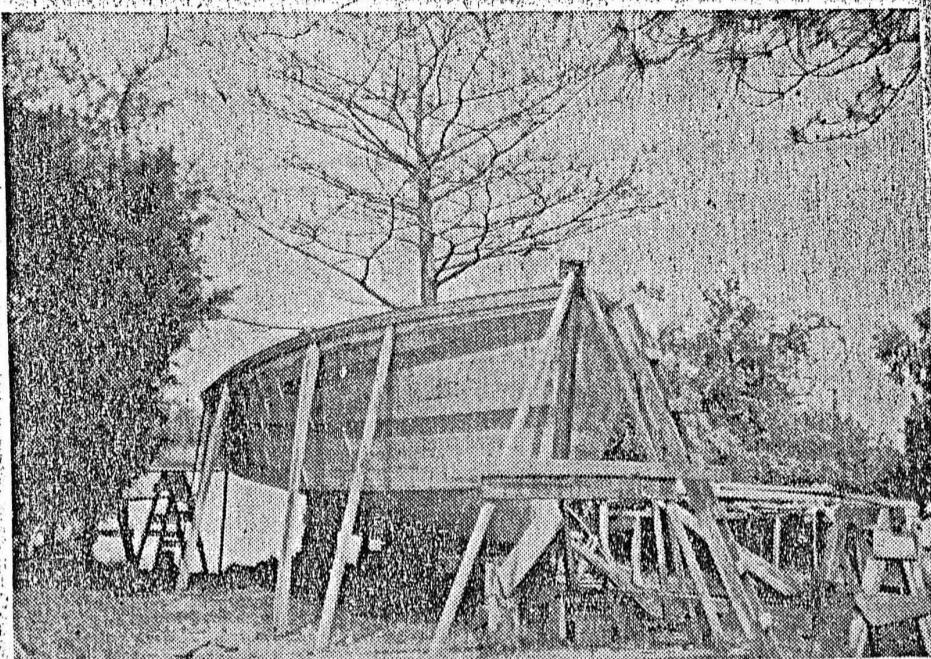

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have two other sons in the service, Garnet Wilson, Jr., 21, and Lloyd Wilson, 18, both of whom are in the Army Air Corps. The older brother is stationed at Scot Field and the younger one at Keesler Field. Lloyd was given a short furlough to come home when news of his brother having been shot down was received.

By LARRY WATERS

"That little man, working on a boat hull over there by the Escatawpa River bank," I thought, "must have a white beard so long he's carrying it rolled up in a box at his feet." I slammed on the car brakes and made a six-point stop in the briars alongside the river road near Moss Point, Mississippi. This had to be looked into.

I walked towards the boat. Or almost boat, because it was sitting up on stilts near the river with some of its siding planks yet to be applied. I hopped over wrapped boards, broken chains, rusted oil drums, abandoned saw-horses, and just plain river grass.

"Come on over and set a spell," the man called.

I didn't see anything to "set" on but a pointed cypress knee, also read. With the water reaching for my feet, Perched like a river crane, color, say "This is the last dad-blamed boat I'm gonna build," the old man said. "Can't take these cool spring breezes any more." The wind blowing off the water was quite chilly. My Easter straw hat my mom didn't keep the cold from seeping through, onto my own thin-topped head.

"My name's John Gandy. I'm three score years and ten, then some. After I finish this boat I'll rest up a spell and let the young bucks build 'em. Won't you?"

By this time, John Gandy of many summers and as many winters had turned away from his work. As he moved over towards me, I realized his "white beard" had stayed behind. Coming out of a box on the ground, like a morning glory vine it trailed up the side of the boat and disappeared into a crack. As any school kid could see (trouble was I was no longer school kid) he was caulking the hull with cotton, a continuous rope being driven into the cracks between the siding. His mallet and chisel lay on a plank beside him.

NOT FIRST BOAT
"This isn't the first boat that you've built," I remarked.

"No sir," said Mr. Gandy. "Not the first — starting building boats when I was sixteen, been working on 'em and building 'em ever since. No, this isn't the first one, but I'm dang sure it's the last one. That is, the last coast-wide cruiser that I have to work without a shelter. Going to go inside building after this. Board motor stuff, and not so many of them."

"How long is this boat?"

"Bout 25 feet. Gonna shove her overboard soon. Then sell her. Will finish her up like the buyer wants."

"Which is what?" I asked.

"Just read a book where a couple crossed the Atlantic in a boat not over 25 feet," I remarked.

COULD GO TO MEXICO

"That's right," agreed Mr. Gandy. "This one can go to Mexico and back if she wants to. And the Gulf gets pretty rough at times." He pointed towards a wharf by the cypress tree. "See that cruiser moored out there? She's one I built. A mite smaller than this. Her owner fixed her up for a pleasure fishing boat. Mostly coast water and river."

I looked and saw a white cruiser daintily bobbing on the restless water — proud, light, and graceful. I took my mental hat off to Mr. Gandy. "In this book I also read," I continued, "that if you paint a wooden hull a dark color, say black, she won't float long. Is that right?"

Mr. Gandy countered with a question. "How many wooden boats have you ever seen that weren't painted white?" I pushed my memory button. "Come to think of it, very few."

"There's your answer then," he smiled. "Fact, any dark color absorbs the sun's heat and cooks the wood. It shrinks and water seeps in. Yep, we mostly paint 'em white."

I took another look at the white cruiser. "That sure is a beauty," Mr. Gandy. What blue prints did you follow?"

"Son, I don't use any prints. Myself, I design the boats, make my own plans. Never in my life made a bad one. Too, I always make my boats a little heavier, a little fuller, and a little stronger. That way they can meet any trouble." By the two samples I saw, one finished and in the water, and one part finished and on the bank, he could justly be proud of his handicraft.

ONCE BUSY PLACE

I glanced around and gathered that the Gandy Boat Works was once a very busy operation. Two "ways" for pulling boats out for repairs, for building new ones.

RANCHER ALSO FINE GUNSMITH

RADIUM, Colo. (AP) — Henry Hinton runs a ranch in northwestern Colorado, but when he can, makes guns, especially heavy muzzle-loading rifles like those used by the nation's earliest settlers. Hinton says he spends much time on the old flint-and-ball muskets that no one could afford to buy one. So he occasionally gives one to a boy who has been confused, just like many men and there are the old timber sheds and

Mr. Gandy showed an interest. "Yes, sir," he said. "Pulled 'em out of the water and worked 'em over."

"What size boats did you work on?"

"20 to 40 feet. Once I took on a 50 footer. Hauled her out o. k. but was scared I wouldn't be able to get her back in. Luckily I had no trouble."

"What made you quit?"

"Just plain got tired of working out in the weather. Ever work on a boat during a blue norther?"

Before I could answer he continued. "Well don't. Coldest job this side of Alaska. I got enough and quit. Besides, I'm too old to fool out in bad weather anymore. How ever, the boys along the Gulf Coast never give me any peace. Always want me to start her up again."

LITTLE BOATS NOW

We walked over to the dock and leaned against its rail. For a while Mr. Gandy was quiet; then kicked a block of wood into the water. "Yes, sir. I'm going to make these little bitty out-board motor jobs from now on. And only when the weather is warm and I feel a mind to. I'm a sorta graduate, wouldn't you say so?"

I looked at Mr. Gandy of several score years and ten — spry and chipper. I looked at the unfinished 25 foot cruiser — graceful lines, painstaking workmanship. I looked at the white clouds reflected in the river and at the cypress trees old as life.

I reached into my mind for the Tablets of Time and wrote in bold, classical letters:

STATE COLLEGE, Miss. — If Mississippi State University had been in existence about 70 million years ago, its students would have enjoyed their own beach, with rushing waves and white sand, right on the campus.

Geologists say the area around Mississippi State was a vast beach at the time the Rocky Mountains were being uplifted.

Because of the great change, students studying geology at State have one of the best field laboratories in the South. The remains of animals of years ago are plentiful on the campus.

Fossils, basic to the study of geology, can be found within walking distance of the classroom and students can begin their own collections right on the campus.

As rains wash away the top soil, new fossils are continually being exposed, according to Ernest E. Russell, assistant professor of Geology at Mississippi State.

"Fossils found on the campus represent animals that lived a few miles from an ancient coastline and many of these animals no longer exist in present day seas," Mr. Russell said.

Students often find valuable specimen which they frequently contribute to the geology museum here for exhibition, or trade with other museums.

A new classroom building now under construction will include a museum where the fossils can be exhibited.

Remains of more recent animals are usually found in fresh road cuts, Mr. Russell said. Teeth from an elephant that lived during the ice age but is now extinct, have been found in this area.

Material for several master's theses has been obtained from the State campus and Oktibbeha County. Most of the material for at least one doctorate dissertation was found in the excavation where Magruder Hall, the girls' dormitory, now stands. Because of a dip in the surface, a cross section of formations are exposed here containing fossils that are found several thousand feet under the surface farther south.

"The knack for finding fossils must be cultivated because a student can scarcely take a walk on the campus without stepping on the remains of ancient animals," Mr. Russell said.

Other countries think highly of the fossils found near here, according to Dr. Paul Dunn, head of the department of geology. A collection valued at only $5 by
